

Fish Smoking – Limits and Liabilities

Please note that these training materials are provided for self directed learning and Seafish cannot accept any responsibility for the accuracy of the content or the suitability of the material.

This particular open learning module was written in 1987. While much of the content is still consistent with current, modern processing practices, it should be realised that some content, particularly any references to specific legislation will be out of date.

That said, studying this module will provide the learner with a good insight into the process of smoking fish (and shellfish) and careful reading will provide a good starting point for further study of the topic.
